

ROLAND PARK PLACE

Teresa Donofrio Snyder President

Roland Park Place President Teresa Donofrio Snyder has served the Roland Park Place (RPP) community for nearly 16 years. Her lifelong admiration of older adults began in childhood and led her to pursue graduate studies in gerontology at Hood College after graduating from the University of Maryland.

Recognized as a regional leader in the senior living sector, Snyder brings 40 years of experience serving older adults to her role overseeing RPP. Under Snyder's leadership, RPP is undergoing a $60 million renovations and expansion project, scheduled for 2021 completion.

The first phase of the project is focused on renovating common areas and dining spaces; construction of a new Arts and Education Center equipped with state-of-the-art acoustical and technological features; and a redesign of the Health Care Center.

The expansion portion of the project is designed to meet growing market interest in metropolitan senior living by offering 58 new independent living residences that will provide an upscale option for people who desire a spacious apartment with an open floor plan while remaining close to the cultural and entertainment attractions unique to Baltimore City.

Snyder, the first woman to serve as president at RPP, likens her role to that of a mayor of a small village. "I try to be aware of services and amenities that touch the lives of our residents to help them achieve their individual goals," she says. "We want to personalize the experience for residents and their families while providing peace of mind."
